

effect of the pension reform and the prolonged economic activity of the population will likely facilitate to overcome and stabilize this intense demographic transition process