

Speech of the Minister of the Interior of the Republic of Croatia
Darko Božinović

Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen,

I would like to thank you for your kind words.

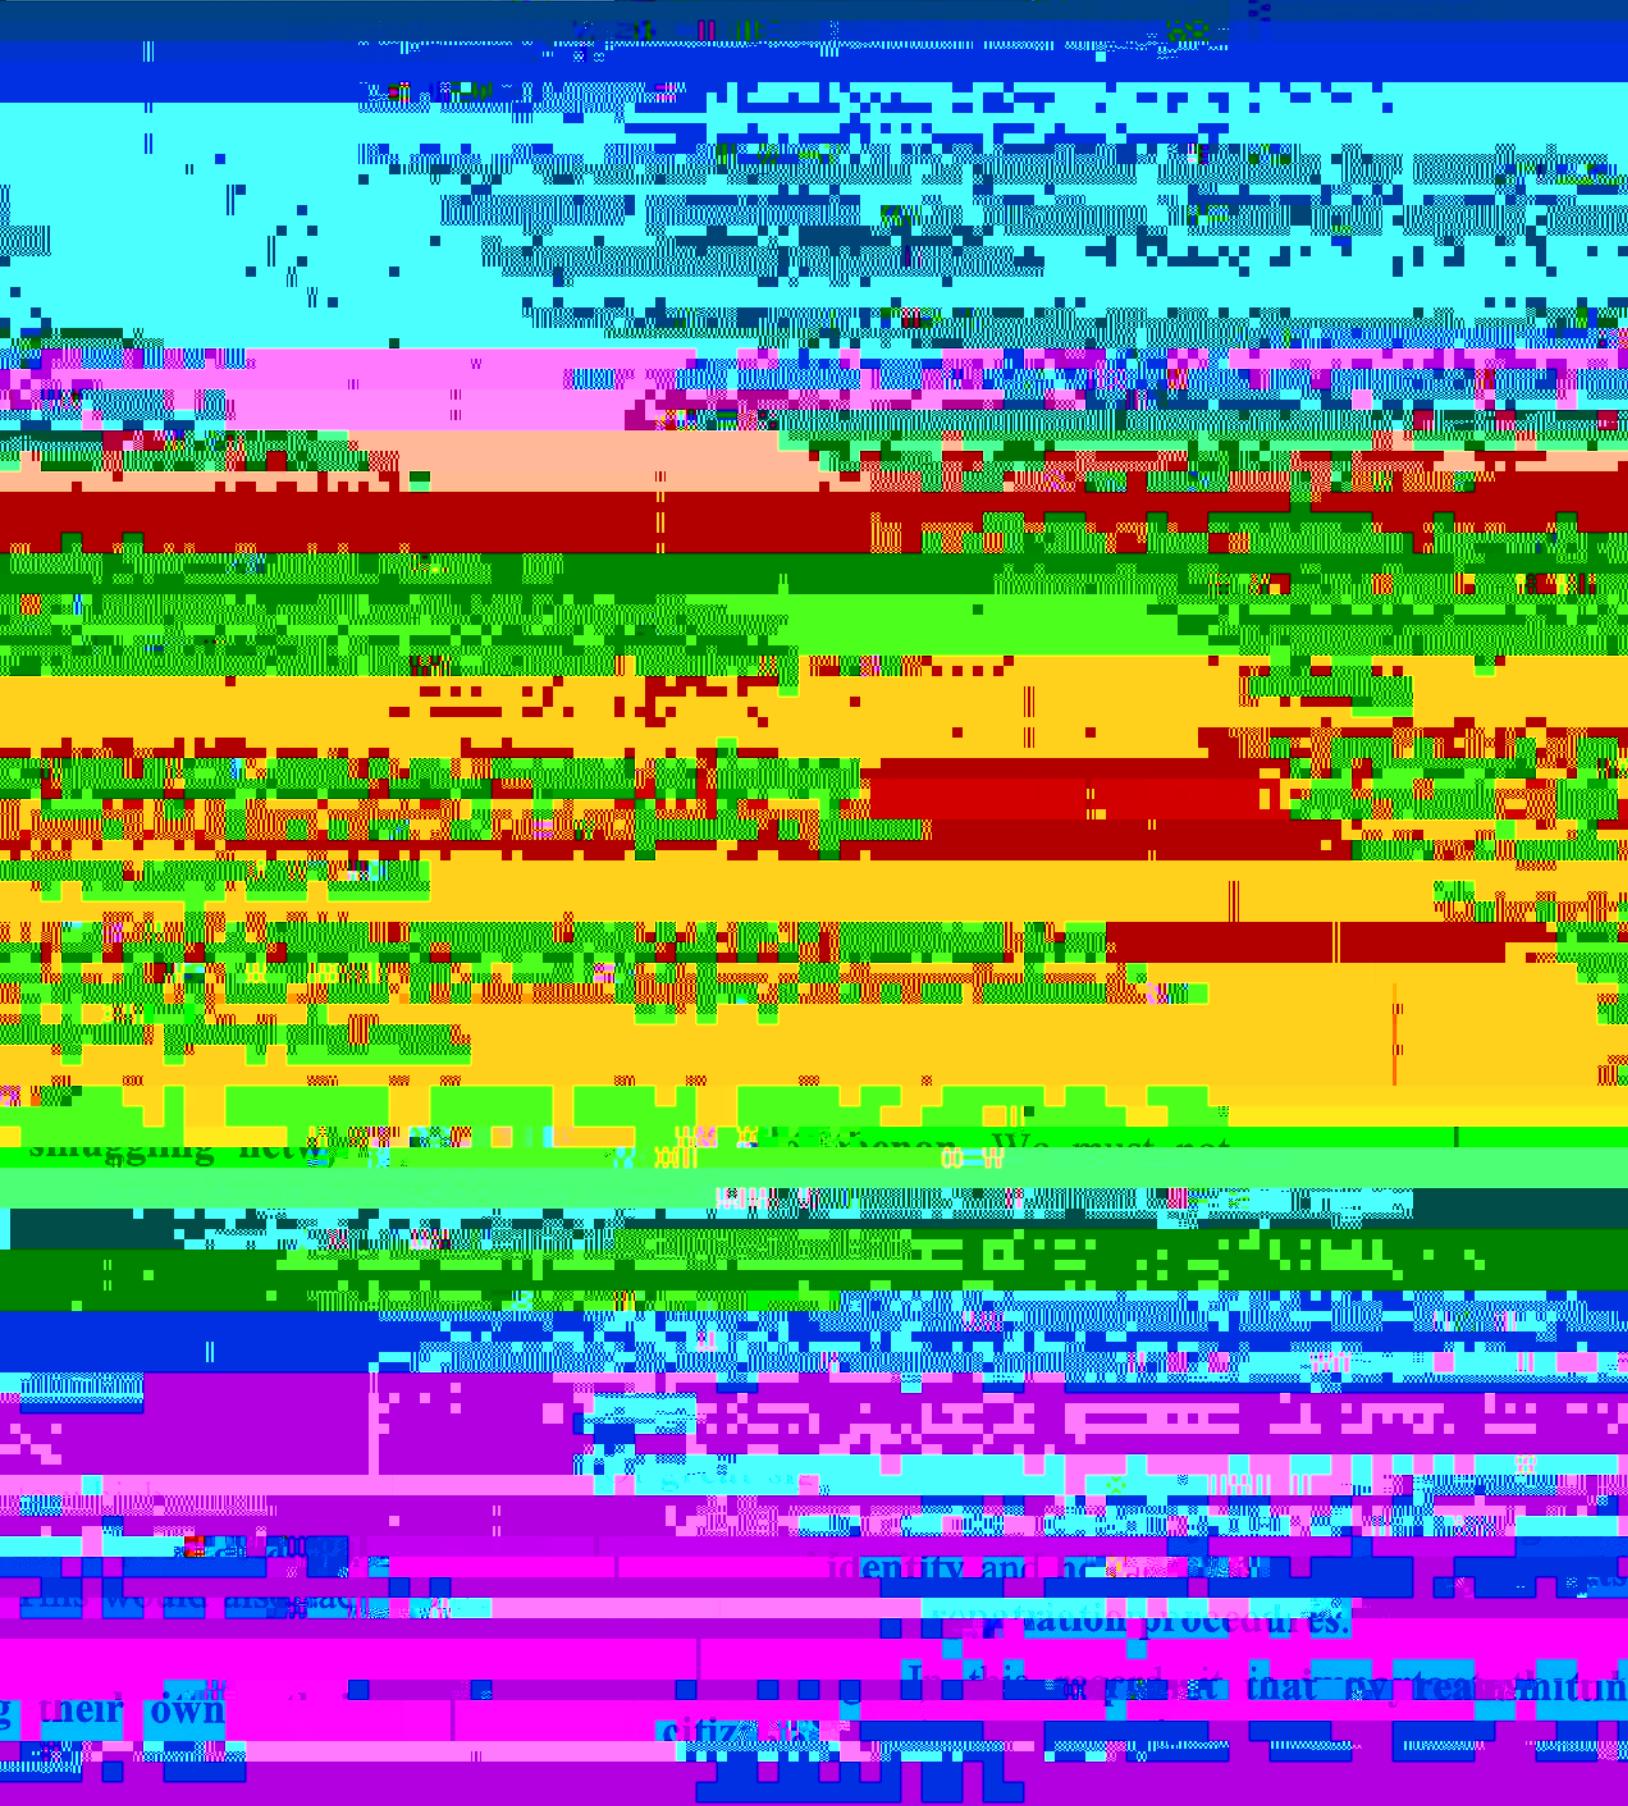

Today, I am here to present the results of our work in the field of security and law enforcement in the first half of the year. We have made significant progress in several areas, particularly in the fight against organized crime and corruption.

We have also taken steps to improve the efficiency of our institutions and to enhance the protection of human rights. We have established a new national police force, which will be responsible for maintaining law and order across the country.

However, we must承认 that there is still much work to be done. We must continue to work towards a more just and peaceful society. We must also ensure that our institutions are transparent and accountable.

Thank you again for your attention.

boundaries. Thus, showing the relationship between the two boundaries is important.

Under the current challenges it faces, Croatia will continue to be ...a leader in the Balkans, and a role model for other countries in the region. We must continue to work together to build a better future for our people and our region. This requires strong leadership, good governance, and a commitment to democracy and human rights. It also requires a willingness to compromise and a recognition that there is no easy answer to the complex challenges we face.

On the training of the armed forces, the government has made significant progress. The military is now more professional, better equipped, and better prepared to defend the country. However, there is still much work to be done. The government must continue to invest in the training and equipment of the armed forces, and must ensure that they are properly integrated into the national defense system.
