This year's special theme: 'Changing population age structures and sustainable development' concerns all UN member states in different ways and to a varying degree. Norway is also affected by what we could perhaps call the ageing syndrome, which characterises most developed countries.

However, because of a relatively high fertility and immigration, the situation so far is less dramatic in our country than in some other high-income countries. Various policy mossures marked an exception because of the refugee crisis in the Middle East. Recently, work-related migration has decreased markedly and emigration has increased. Madam Chair, there has never been more young people in the world than now. This is a grapt apportunity which at the assentions descended assertion and toward a - 11-1 Women's and youth's rights and non-discrimination in economic, social and political life is a

	This education addresses the differences in sexual orientations and gender identities that exists, including among the number and students. However we still see challenges among youth and children. Therefore, in Norway's new sexual health strategy, the role of comprehensive sexuality education is further strengthened and it is anticipated developing programmes for inclusions of programmes in kindergartens in the near future.
