

)

(

-

-

.

.

ú

My country, indeed, affirms the integrity of this Principle purpose as hoped, namely, combating impunity and working against criminals as possible, in which all States and Organizations shall cooperate on, seek to achieve and enforce justice. However, it is early to adopt and endorse this Principle in which the judicial procedures for applying this Principle still lack clarity and convenience of standards, rules and mechanisms to determine the type of crimes that this Principle intends to enforce justice upon its offenders, as well as other obstacles in both format and content which were raised by many Member States. Saudi Arabia, while stressing the integrity of this Principle purpose as hoped, believes that these obstacles should not be overcome in any way, mainly, the principles adopted in the Charter of the United Nations and International Law, in particular the principle of sovereignty, inviolability and equality of States.

The endorsement o

principles of the Charter of the United Nations and International Law by any State through its domestic legislation; and not to approve any legislation except what corresponds to what has been adopted in the said principles.

We also believe that the considered judicial procedures by States within their domestic legislations shall be examined. In view of the disparity among States in their current applications and applicable methods, the endorsement of the Global Jurisdiction Principle will not achieve its desired purpose.

Finally, my country affirms that it supports all what makes justice achieved in accordance with its domestic Laws and Legislations, the international conventions it has signed and the applicable international norms. It also calls all Member States for more study and research on how to achieve and implement global jurisdiction within the framework of the Charter of the United Nations and International Law in a way that achieves the goal agreed upon, namely, combating impunity.

Thanks to all of you