

the necessity of a gender-sensitive understanding and approach to mass atrocities and incitement to violence; that in situations where tensions are high and populations are divided along identity or sectarian lines, religious institutions and leaders can play a paramount role in preventing and responding to atrocity crimes;

the important role and demonstrated impact of religious leaders in calling for an end to tensions, hostility

