

What we do

The Framework Team is an innovative system-wide initiative based on the principles delineated in the Secretary-General's 2001 Report on the Prevention of Armed Conflict, namely that "the primary responsibility for conflict prevention rests with national governments and other local actors," and the role of the UN is to assist them in the task of building their own mediative capacities and institutions. The need for such support has been reiterated in the Secretary-General's 2009 Report on Promoting Development through the Reduction and Prevention of Armed Violence
