

COVID-19 represents the greatest global challenge since the end of the Second World War and will require global cooperation at greater levels than ever before.

Failure to act swiftly will only entrench and widen existing inequalities and

