The official assessment conducted by UN Women in 2012 and the subsequent report by UN Women in 2013, as well as the subsequent report by UN Women in 2014, have provided a comprehensive overview of the current state of gender equality in the world. The report highlights the progress made in various areas, such as education, health, and economic participation, while also identifying the challenges that remain. It calls for continued efforts to achieve gender equality and sustainable development for all.
