

PHILIPPINES

CHECKLIST FOR JUST DELIVERY

This is a checklist to be completed prior to the delivery of documents to the Permanent Mission of the Philippines to the United Nations. We appreciate your cooperation in this matter.

STATEMENT

BY

H.E. MR. LIBRAN N. CABACTULAN

PERMANENT REPRESENTATIVE

PHILIPPINE MISSION TO THE UNITED NATIONS

THIRD COMMITTEE DEBATE

ON

AGENDA ITEM 28

(ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN)

66TH SESSION

UNITED NATIONS GENERAL ASSEMBLY

UN HEADQUARTERS, NEW YORK

12 OCTOBER 2011

Philippine Statement on Agenda Item 28: Advancement of Women

MR. CHAIRMAN:

Allow me to thank you for the giving us the opportunity to speak on the important issue of advancement of women.

W., delegation wishes to thank the Secretary General for his comprehensive reports which serve to enrich our discussions. We also appreciate the concluding statement given by the UN system to advancement of women and the attention made to maintain an equality under law and empowerment of women high on the international agenda.

MR CHAIRMAN:

My delegation aligns itself with the statement made by the G77 and China on the ASEAN-ROK Ministerial Conference on the part of ASEAN.

Last year, we celebrated the nine anniversary taken on the advancement of women. We commemorated also fifteen anniversary of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, and we witnessed the establishment of the UN Entity for Gender Equality and Empowerment of Women. Much progress has been made in the advancement of and empowerment of women. Gender equality is no longer just a women's issue, but a human rights and a development issue.

This year, we have the opportunity to focus on areas where progress is much needed and work on the pressing concerns faced especially by rural women, older women and migrant women workers. The importance of addressing their needs cannot be overemphasized. Their empowerment are all interconnected. Their achievement is linked to the achievement of the Millennium Development goals and other internationally agreed goals. Their empowerment is integral to our society's progress.

Mr. Chairman:

the 2008-2009 global financial and economic crisis, food and energy crises and climate change have all had significant impacts on rural areas. Despite progress made towards achieving the MDGs, environmental degradation, poverty, agreed development goals, rural women in many parts of the world continue to face manifold disadvantages and discrimination.

On the improvement on the situation of women in rural areas, the Secretary continues to be economically and socially disadvantaged because of their limited access to economic resources and opportunities, their exclusion from decision making and their disproportionate burden of unpaid work.

This is unfortunate and could signify that the vast reservoir of potential talent of women in many parts of the world remains untapped despite the growing recognition that all women and indigenous women contribute to economic development, education, health, environmental sustainability and other aspects relevant to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals.

A systematic and strategic integration of the economic empowerment of women in rural areas into national development strategies and plans, including in areas of rural development, infrastructure and local government, is clearly needed if we are to achieve the Millennium Development Goals.

Mr. Chairman:

Violence, abuse and discrimination against migrant women to participate fully in all spheres of society – be it economic, political or social!

My delegation is pleased with the Committee's report that action has been taken nationally, regionally and internationally to address violence and discrimination against women, migrant workers and their families. We welcome the adoption of the international instrument, increasing awareness and the adoption of the Convention concerning Decent Work for Migrant Workers which is a major addition to the international human rights framework relevant to the protection of women migrant workers. My delegation is proud of its contribution in shaping this historic ILO instrument which recognizes discrimination, which can occur at every stage of migrant workers' protection, equal rights and equal opportunities.

Much, however, remains to be done.

Key gaps persist in respect of implementing global normative standards and policy frameworks related to protecting women migrant workers against discrimination, violence and violations of their rights. Targeted measures to specifically address discrimination and violence against women migrant workers are lacking and undocumented women migrant workers remain particularly vulnerable to violence, exploitation and discrimination. This is unacceptable.

Mr. Chairman:

The Philippines' commitment to gender equality and the advancement of women and gender equality as integral to the country's progress and discrimination against women in many forms is a placeholder in society. No less than our Constitution must make it a state policy to recognize the role of women in nation building and to ensure the fundamental equality before the law of women and men.

Republic Act 9710, otherwise known as the 'Magna Carta of Women,' serves as a legal framework to protect women against discrimination, exploitation, unsafe, safe working conditions and human trafficking. The law ensures that Filipino women are legally protected from all forms of violence and from discrimination in employment, education, and training; that women are guaranteed security in times of disaster; other areas; that access to health care provided with comprehensive health care and information; and that women are afforded equal treatment before the law and within matters relating to marriage.

The Magna Carta of Women also places a particular focus on the rights of women in marginalised sectors such as small farmers and rural workers, informal sector workers and the urban poor, indigenous women and those with disabilities, as well as older women and girls. The law ensures their right to food security, affordable and secure housing, protection and recognition of their cultural identity. It guarantees the protection of their work status, and protects them against discrimination in wages, conditions of work and employment opportunities in host countries.

The Magna Carta of women further ensures mandatory training on human rights and gender sensitivity to all government personnel involved in the protection and defense of women against gender-based violence, and mandates local government units to establish a violence against women task force in every barangay to address violence cases.

As regards women's participation and representation, the law provides for affirmative action measures to ensure women's equitable participation and representation in the civil service, development councils and planning bodies, as well as political parties and international bodies, including the private sector.

To complement its national domestic policies and legislation, the Philippines continues to promote and support initiatives for the empowerment and full advancement of women at the bilateral, regional and international levels. Cognizant that women make up a large number of the world's most vulnerable and highly dependent on natural resources for their livelihood and are disproportionately vulnerable to and affected by climate change, the Philippines, at the Commission on the Status of Women (CSW) shepherded a resolution on mainstreaming gender equality in and empowerment of women in climate change policies and strategies.

Mr Chairman:

In collaboration with partners in the international community, we will continue to promote gender equality and the prevention of violence against women, promote gender equality and empowerment of women.

Despite the continuing challenges that we face, my delegation remains optimistic that significant progress can be achieved for the advancement and empowerment of women. It is after all a shared aspiration and, with the establishment of UN Women, we have no doubt that the capacity of the UN system to strengthen gender equality and empowerment of women will be further enhanced.

Finally Mr Chairman, in line with the practice of previous sessions, my delegation together with Indonesia will be submitting a resolution on violence against women. I look forward to the valuable contributions and support of all member states for this important resolution on advancement of women.

Thank you.